

Dheepa Rajan has been at WHO since 2006 in various roles within the health systems division – spanning health governance, financing, and service delivery - at headquarters, and since 2022 with the European Region. She has led several key publications for WHO such as the Handbook on Social Participation for Universal Health Coverage, Health System Performance Assessment: A Framework for Policy Analysis, and Strategizing National Health for the 21st Century. She is currently leading the work on a WHO flagship publication on primary health care. She holds an MD from Germany, did her MSc in health economics & policy in the UK, and her PhD on traditional medicine in India.